I am so excited to be a part of Roots & Branches Forest School and to meet the families and children who will be participating in this amazing adventure. My daughter's name is Arisa, and she will be joining me in the forest as well. I am continuing on my journey to bring more mindfulness into my life through daily practice and self study, as it is something I truly feel everyone can benefit from, and is so important to instill in our children. As someone who feels that we can all learn a lot from nature and the environment, I am passionate about educating young minds, along with educating myself and the next generation on environmental issues with compassion and kindness. Showing children the wonder and beauty of nature is an important part of my personal philosophy. I have a true love and respect for nature and animals, and strive to instill those same feelings in the children I teach, using gentle guidance and materials from the natural world. As an Early Childhood Educator and teacher I pride myself on being a role model to so many impressionable people, and I know that there is no greater feeling than seeing the children I teach grow, mature, learn, and succeed. I look forward to having a lot of fun at forest school with everyone, and sharing in this wonderful experience with the families and children.
